GED 796 Induction, Mentoring and Advanced Fieldwork

At the beginning of the program for the Clear Administrative Credential, candidates self assess their leadership dispositions. These data are incorporated into their Individualized Induction Plan (IIP) to improve their skills in these areas.

Plan for Improvement

The candidates scored themselves very highly in these areas. In their plan they will be expected to apply these dispositions to the challenges that face them. In the future, the department will confer with coaches to help candidates apply how their personal skills transfer into their new job

At the culmination of the program, the coach assesses the dispositions of each candidate. No data are available for these criteria.

Plan for Improvement

At this point in the program coaches would expect to see strong dispositional skills exhibited by the candidates. Individual candidates are counseled if their dispositions fall below a three on a four point scale.

The Academic Dean and Faculty will work together to create a system of accountability for completion of these data by University Mentors.

At the end of the program, candidates request the survey completed by various faculty/staff at their workplace. Surveys are scored by the University Coach and results given to the candidate for comparison to the initial 260 degree survey. It is expected that scores would increase after time in the program with the coaching process and the experience gained. Data cannot be compared to the initial 260 degree survey in this report as it does not identify same students.
