

Center for Justice & Reconciliation

Annual Report, 2017-2018

I. PURPOSES OF PLNU ACADEMIC CENTERS AND INSTITUTES

CJR staff and interns work with faculty, staff, and students on campus to build programming on justice and reconciliation as related to their field of study and area of administrative responsibility. The Center offers students the chance to be involved as research assistants and interns. Students gain justice and reconciliation discipleship, leadership/professional development, an expanded subject-specific knowledge base, work experience networking with a wide range of groups working in specific fields of research/action, experience in student organizing, and potential academic credit (in collaboration with student's major/department). Also, in collaboration with PLNU's Marketing and Creative Services and the Director of Public Affairs, the CJR is often tasked by PLNU to provide local, national, and international expert commentary regarding issues related to the key themes on which the CJR focuses. The CJR staff and volunteers fundraise and friend-raise for the continued development of donors, relationships with foundations, and grants, as well as public and alumni relations to support the mission of the CJR and the University. The CJR continues to serve as one of the prominent outward facing voices representing the University in the community.

II. ALIGNMENT OF THE CENTER/INSTITUTE WITH THE UNIVERSITY

The Center for Justice and Reconciliation exists to nurture the prophetic imagination, to help the community study poverty and oppression and teach Christian means of social engagement. The CJR gives concrete and symbolic representation of the university's historic commitment to be a prophetic voice with particular attention to justice and reconciliation. The CJR sits in the nexus between the liberal arts and the professions. It serves as a catalytic programmatic space for students, staff and faculty to engage in applying their disciplines and skills to real-world situations, to bring the expertise of our campus in service of real world problems, and to bring the real world problems and the professionals that work on them into the classroom and into the life of the campus.

III. ADVISORY BOARD

There is no CJR Advisory Board at present.

V. EFFECTIVENESS: SERVICES AND COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT

CJR Student Staff

The Center for Justice & Reconciliation Student Staff position assists with basic administrative functions of the CJR office. This position is the main liaison between the CJR staff and the CJR Interns for the implementation of events throughout the academic year. The students in this role report directly to the CJR Assistant. They assist in the management of on and off campus events by coordinating, marketing, scheduling: Annual HT Research Conference; Hope Rising; Receptions; Homecoming related events; various fairs; Brewed Awakening; Border Tour; Roots of Giving Fair Trade Market; kNOw MORE events and any other CJR event. Student staff take the lead in communicating to the CJR interns needs for these events as well as implementing a schedule of who is responsible for each event. Sophomore International Development Studies major Zach Lickteig and senior Business Administration major Luz Aramburo served in this capacity for us with excellence.

CJR Student Internship

An interdisciplinary team of student leaders dedicated to the mission of the CJR, in the spirit of “nurturing the prophetic imagination,” “to study poverty and oppression and teach Christian means of social engagement,” plan and support CJR activities.

Student Interns:

- Gabriela Masuda: External Relations Intern (through January 2018)
- Lauren Perez: HT-RADAR Intern
- Elaine Giles:
 - Fall: kNOw MORE & CAT Intern, Roots of Giving Coordinator
 - Spring: Wear Justice Coordinator

CJR Student Staff & Intern Evaluation

The following is a summary of our findings from exit interviews with our student interns and staff:

- Highlights:
 - The friendly and nurturing organizational culture at the CJR
 - Planning and helping at events (Wear Justice, Hope Rising, the HT-RADAR Conference, etc)
 - Attending Advisory Council Meetings
 - Getting the new Ambassador Program off the ground
- Room for improvement:
 - Find alternatives to making tedious phone calls
 - Revamp the format for Brewed Awakening
 - Give everyone a chance to participate in different CJR areas

CJR Ambassador Program

Given the range of requests for getting involved in the work of the CJR that we’ve received from students in recent years, this year we piloted a student volunteer program we’ve titled the CJR Ambassador Program. Ambassadors are recruited by the CJR team and coordinated principally by CJR Student Interns with supervision from our Program Assistant.

This year 14 CJR Ambassadors:

- Helped raise awareness through word-of-mouth and social media
- Worked side-by-side with CJR interns on events like Brewed Awakening, Roots of Giving, Hope Rising, Wear Justice and Border Pilgrimages.
- Kept classes, dorms, social groups, etc. up to date and interested in the happenings of CJR around campus throughout the year.
- Represented a range of ages and dorms; were intentionally diverse.
- Helped run social media account and PR assistance, such as the CJR instagram.
- Were present at the majority of CJR events on campus, specifically ones related to their focus.

- Kept informed about events related to social justice happening on campus, in the San Diego area, and around the world.
- Showed interest in and invested in the issues that CJR focuses on.

Brewed Awakening

“Brewed Awakening: Serving Justly Traded Coffee, Tea and Speakers to Stir the Social Conscience.” Sponsored by PLNU’s Center for Justice and Reconciliation, the Brewed Awakening series gives a platform to speakers who bring critical analysis of pressing contemporary social injustices while pointing to ways of engaging these issues with hopeful alternatives. All speakers are encouraged to reflect on the relationship between their passion for justice, their actions, and their faith. Brewed Awakenings are regularly co-sponsored by other PLNU programs that relate to the night’s theme. Over a dozen faculty make Brewed Awakenings a regular part of their courses. PLNU alumni surveys have named the Brewed Awakening series as one of the favorite PLNU memories.

Border Pilgrimages

In collaboration with Spiritual Development, every semester the CJR leads a weekend Border Pilgrimage for students, faculty, staff, and community members. The Border Pilgrimage

Roots of Giving

Each year the Roots of Giving Fair brings artisans, farmers, immigrant businesses, and other community members together on the PLNU campus to reshape the idea of giving. The Fair's goal is to suggest ways to live out an alternate "Gift Economy" in the midst of the hyper-consumer world.

December 1, 2017, 6-10pm, Caf Lane

- Live music, food vendors
- 33 Fair Trade vendors & Local Artisans
- Over 500 in attendance
- Coordinated by CJR intern Elaine Giles with support from CJR Administrative Assistant Patty Richardson and 17 volunteers

Wear Justice

In partnership with the Office of Sustainability and the Center for International Development, this week-long educational event featured a screening of the documentary "True Cost", opportunities to donate clothes, and a social media competition to inform students about the importance of ethical purchasing practices. The week culminated in a vibrant fair on caf lane on Friday, April 13th, which took place from 2-5pm and followed the model: donate, swap, buy. This model showed attendees alternative methods of obtaining clothing which decrease the negative impact of the clothing industry on people and the planet. Students and staff participated in a large-scale clothing swap, purchased from ethical vendors, repaired clothes that needed to be fixed, and enjoyed music and fair trade coffee. The event brought in enormous levels of participation, and increased the level of education surrounding the clothing industry's harmful effects

"True Cost" Movie Night: Tuesday, April 10, 2018
Attendance: 127

Clothing Swap: Friday, April 13, 2018, 2-5pm success, including 20 student and alumni volunteers.

The Hope Rising Awards were presented to Dianne Jacob of the San Diego County Board of Supervisors, Mara Madrigal-Weiss of the San Diego County Office of Education, Survivor Advocate and Founder/Executive Director of The Well Path Marjorie Saylor, and Community Activist and Anti-Trafficking Advocate Ginger Shaw for working to end human trafficking in our region.

Hope Rising Event Committee: Kim Berry Jones, Connie Conard, Tiffany DaSilva, Karen

Hutchens Gross, Robin La Dow, Kimberly Marshall, Kevin & Lisa McGinnis, Leanne Mudge, Terri Pontzious, Lynlee Austell Slayter, and Michelle Shoemaker. This committee is primarily made up of members of the larger community.

Hope Rising Honorary Committee: Linda Brower, Mayor and Mrs. Kevin Faulconer, Sally La Dow, Karen Meguiar, Virginia Napierskie, Betty Peabody, Carissa Phelps, and District Attorney Summer Stephan.

The Beauty for Ashes Scholarship Fund

This scholarship for survivors of human trafficking is providing hope for a better life for victims all over the country. For the 2017-2018 academic year the Beauty for Ashes Scholarship Fund supported five student survivors. The first graduates of the program will graduate from PLNU in December 2018. Scholarships were awarded in the amount of $46,300 in 2017/18.

HT-RADAR

The Human Trafficking Research and Data Advisory Roundtable (HT-RADAR), coordinated by CJR Research Associate Bernadette Winter-Villaluz, facilitates collaboration among researchers, identifies research funding, shares data, and impacts decision making in the region with quality research. We do so by means of 1) maintaining a communications network with all interested research producers and consumers, 2) hosting quarterly HT-RADAR meetings for research updates and to build collaboration, 3) publishing a quarterly newsletter, 4) creating, maintaining, and updating an HT-RADAR website to facilitate communications and dissemination of human trafficking research to the public (including other resources for researchers and HT stakeholders such as funding opportunities, conferences, journals, etc.), and 5) planning and hosting a conference for human trafficking researchers to gather with other researchers and practitioners in order to improve best practices, policy, and funding opportunities to combat trafficking.

Network

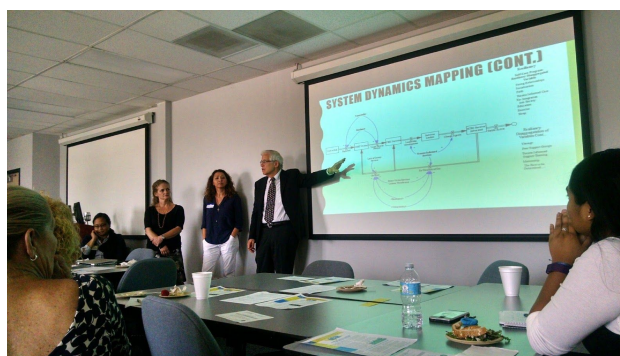

The general network is composed of stakeholders who have received the quarterly newsletters, are interested in attending the quarterly meetings, have participated in the quarterly meetings, and/or have expressed a research need. In May 2017, the general network consisted of 286 contacts and has increased to 403 by the time of this report. This reflects a 41% total increase in HT-RADAR's general network over a 12-month period.

Quarterly Meetings

As a regional network and clearinghouse for human trafficking related research, HT-RADAR's quarterly meetings are designed to encourage communication and collaboration across sectors to help meet research needs from the San Diego / Tijuana (SD/TJ) region.

HT-RADAR held the following quarterly meetings in 2017-2018:

- Summer 2017: July 6, 2017

Quarterly E-Newsletters

Following each quarterly meeting, we update the HT-RADAR network with a newsletter that summarizes the meeting, highlights related research, highlights human trafficking-related news and legislative updates, provides related funding and conference information as well as information on San Diego County's Advisory Council on Human Trafficking and CSEC. HT-RADAR distributed the following quarterly newsletters in 2017-2018:

- Summer 2017: distributed on August 1, 2017 to 314 recipients
- Fall 2017: distributed on November 16, 2017 to 349 recipients
- Spring 2018: distributed on March 14, 2018 to 376 recipients
- Summer 2018: scheduled for July 11, 2018

Annual Research Conference

The second HT-RADAR Conference was held on May 12, 2018 at PLNU's Liberty Station Conference Center. HT-RADAR's 2018 Human Trafficking Research Conference featured some of the most current national and regional research on human trafficking. This one-day conference included three panels, 18 presentations, and keynotes from HEAL's Executive Director, Dr. Hanni Stoklosa, and Survivors for Solutions' Founding Director, Autumn Burris.

Thanks to our HT-RADAR grant, PLNU's in-kind contributions, and the District Attorney's Office ($22,004.94), we were able to get national attention and host some of the top researchers in human trafficking from around the country as they spoke wisdom into the anti-trafficking movement in San Diego. HT-RADAR provided up to 6.5 of continuing education units (CEs) in partnership with the Institute on Violence, Abuse and Trauma (IVAT) and PLNU.

About 145 attendees participated at the conference, representing a wide range of stakeholders and 80 organizations, agencies, and institutions such as Polaris and the Urban Institute. Approximately 75% of attendees were from San Diego and about 24% were either from other parts of California or from out-of-state. This year's conference has been included in the Congressional Record and can be found on U.S. Congressman Ted Poe's website (<https://poe.house.gov/floor-remarks?ID=564B11B2-7188-4CBA-AB27-CE8EBC309798>).

Our assessment surveys to our conference participants yielded a 23% response rate. The vast majority of survey respondents felt that the keynotes (85%), presentations (81%), and panels (78%) were either relevant or very relevant to their anti-human trafficking work. We also received qualitative feedback from participants. The most common strengths mentioned were the networking opportunities and the strength of the research/content provided through the conference. Suggestions included expanding the conference to a two-day conference and additional topics such as recruitment, cognitive disabilities, and recidivism rates.

kNOw MORE

Curriculum Team

The kNOw MORE! curriculum is facilitated by a Survivor Facilitator in collaboration with a Teaching Artist. As middle and high school students are more likely to respond to peers, college-age actor/facilitators also support in the learning journey of the participants. At the center of the curriculum is a dramatic method called Forum theatre. This drama has a twofold function: 1) it provides a realistic narrative of the progression of a high school age trafficking victim, 2) it serves as an interactive device to offer youth the opportunity to play out the different choices they could make to empower themselves or potential peer victims within a human trafficking scenario.

Teaching Artists

Catherine Hanna Schrock, also the Artistic Director of programming, has been the primary teaching artist this past year. Her understudy, Kayla Morales, completed training this year and facilitated several programs on her own. Catherine has brought up Sofia Zaragoza to begin training in teaching artistry in preparation for the upcoming year.

Catherine Hanna Schrock received a certificate of excellence from Cajon Valley District for the CJR's kNOw MORE presentations at Greenfield Middle School.

Survivor Expert

Three HT survivor experts who were trained in kNOW MORE the previous year, continued to work on the kNOW MORE team this past year, co-facilitating the program along with the Lead Teaching Artist. The HT survivor expert team includes Ebony Jones, Jamie Johnson, and Jessica Kim. Additionally, Domaniece Roy has begun her training with the Artistic Director to prepare to co-facilitate in the upcoming school year.

Curriculum Development

kNOw MORE has continually received acknowledgement for its impact during the program. Recognition has been given by schools, the San Diego Human Trafficking Advisory Council, and the curriculum's reputation has spanned beyond San Diego County as well. Thus, the CJR is in the final refining stages of a complete and shareable kNOw MORE curriculum to sell and train outside organizations to carry out the program. CJR is pursuing full intellectual property rights and is in the midst of final curriculum layout design.

Assessment

The CJR is working toward a full assessment of its programming in a Program Review in the 2018-19 academic year.
