PLNU Mission: To Teach ~ To Shape ~ To Send

Point Loma Nazarene University exists to provide higher education in a vital Christian community where minds are engaged and challenged, character is modeled and formed, and service is an expression of faith. Being of Wesleyan heritage, we strive to be a learning community where grace is foundational, truth is pursued, and holiness is a way of life.

Course Learning Outcomes

Students will be able to:

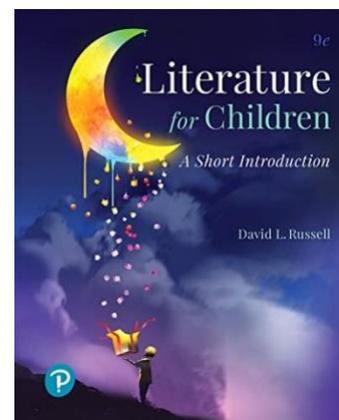

1. Closely read and critically analyze texts in their original languages and/or in translation. (PLO 2,3, 5)
2. Recall, identify, and use fundamental concepts of literary study to read and discuss texts
 - a. Standard literary terminology
 - b. Modes/genres of literature
 - c. Elements of literary genres
 - d. Literary periods (dates, writers, characteristics, and important developments)
 - e. Contemporary critical approaches
 - f. Extra-literary research (PLO 2, 3, 5)
3. Analyze the social, cultural, ethnic, gendered, and/or historical contexts of the works and their authors, and connect the texts with their own lives. (PLO 1)
4. Create detailed and informed textual analysis of literary works that analyze several of the fundamental concepts of literary study with mastery increasing beyond the 200 course level (PLO 1).

Course Description:

This is an upper division literature course that offers a survey of classical and contemporary children's literature. It provides the historical background of children's literature as well as the modern application of the literature. This course is taught as a literature course, not a methods course; therefore, it provides an opportunity for students to read, analyze, synthesize, and develop an understanding of what quality children's literature is. It functions as an important literary foundation for students preparing to teach, to work with children in fields such as illustration, psychology, sociology, as a children's pastor, a children's worker, a parent, or in other fields requiring a basic knowledge of children's literature. While this course is focused on reading children's books, it is a rigorous 3-unit upper division literature course that supports the survey of human endeavors from an historical, cultural, linguistic, and philosophical perspective developing a critical appreciation of human expression in both artistic and literary forms.

Course Materials: We will be using Literature for Children: A Short Introduction (9e) and many children's books in this class.

The specific children's books you are assigned to read in this course are listed according to genre and subgenre, and they are identified by reading age group in the syllabus (P for Primary, I for Intermediate, and A for Advanced). Begin at home by looking for the books listed on the syllabus and use the university/public/county libraries. Only one copy of each book is on reserve at the reserve desk in Ryan Library. The librarians at the Point Loma Branch have ordered several copies of each book and placed them on a shelf with my name above it in the children's book section of the library. You do not need to buy every book, but it may be of use to you in an effort to build a library to prepare for a career in working with children or to have books available to share with children in your life for a variety of purposes.

Canvas: Please check Canvas regularly, as the course materials are subject to change at any time. You will also receive announcements and grades there. The Canvas site for this class can be reached through canvas.pointloma.edu. If you need support, email oit@pointloma.edu.

Email: Email is the best way to stay in contact with me outside of class. If other circumstances interfere this course, contact me as early as possible and we will find a way to work with your situation to ensure that you still succeed in this class.

Attendance: Attendance is required. Missing class can affect a course grade since in-class assignments cannot be made up and late papers are not accepted. Absences that exceed the PLNU absence policy of 10% will result in a letter to the Vice President for Academic Affairs requesting de-enrollment from the course. Note that arriving late or exiting class early three times will equal one absence as per the PLNU attendance policy.

LJWL Department Policy on Plagiarism: The Department of Literature, Writing, and Languages deems intellectual and academic integrity to be critical to academic success and personal development; therefore, any unethical practice will be detrimental to the student's academic record and moral character. Students who present the work of others, which includes but is not limited to borrowing another student's work, buying a paper, or using the thoughts or ideas of others as if their own (using information in a paper without citation), commit plagiarism. Writing that has been edited and rewritten by anyone but the student in the class is considered to be plagiarized as well. Students will be held accountable for plagiarized material whether the material was plagiarized intentionally or unintentionally. Plagiarized work will result in a failing grade for the assignment and possibly for the course. In either event, a written report will be filed with the department chair and area dean. The dean will review the report and submit it to the provost and the vice president for student development. It will then be placed in the student's academic file.

PLNU Copyright Policy: Point Loma Nazarene University, as a non-profit educational institution, is entitled by law to use materials protected by the US Copyright Act for classroom education. Any use of those materials outside the class may violate the law.

Academic Accommodations: While all students are expected to meet the minimum standards for completion of this course as established by the instructor, students with disabilities may require academic accommodations. At Point Loma Nazarene University, these students are requested to file documentation during the first two weeks of the semester with the Educational Access Center (EAC), located in the Bond Academic Center. This policy assists the University in its commitment to full compliance with Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act and the Americans with Disabilities Act. Section 504 (a) prohibits discrimination against students with special needs and guarantees all qualified students equal access to and benefits of PLNU programs and activities. Once the student files documentation, the EAC will contact the student's instructors and provide written recommendations for reasonable and appropriate accommodations to meet the individual learning needs of the student.

Please have the readings/assignments completed by the date on which it is listed. For example, read LfC Chapter 1 by Jan. 14th. (LfC stands for Literature for Children (9e) by David L. Russel.)

The course schedule is subject to revision at any time at the discretion of the instructor.
