Conclusions Drawn from Data:

For political science, our general education students are performing well on all of our criteria, as they consistently meet our benchmark for success (minimum 2.75 out of 4.00). Their writing illustrates their ability to convey complex concepts and themes in an insightful and sophisticated manner. We continue to be impressed by their articulation and communication skills, especially given that many are first semester freshman. Finally, they are portraying a great deal of empathy with regard to social problems in the political world. In terms of areas in need of improvement, we would like to work with them on making their writing more evidence-based, rather than opinion-based.

Changes to be Made Based on Data:

None at this time. Continue to collect data.

Rubric Used

Assessment Rubric for GE Learning Outcome #2C

Students who complete this GE course will: demonstrate an understanding of the complex issues faced by diverse groups in global and/or cross-cultural contexts.

Evaluators are encouraged to assign a zero to any work sample or collection of work that does not meet benchmark (cell one) level performance.
